TENNESSEEInteresting Events
From all Parts of the State

Indian Ground.—A barbecue was held at Thorpe in the interest of the school.

Dyersburg.—B. J. Campbell, a tie-cutter, was killed at Richwood's when a large limb of a tree fell on him.

Dyersburg.—Friendship, in Crockett county, is going to celebrate Aug. 4 with an old-time barbecue and speaking.

Union City.—Much anxiety is manifested here on account of 14 persons, mostly children, having been bitten by a dog affected with rabies.

Maryville.—The Blount county teachers' annual institute was held in the auditorium at the courthouse with Superintendent Nancy Lee Broady presiding.

Bristol.—The officials of the Federal Dyeing and Chemical company at Kingsport deny persistent rumors that the mammoth industry is about to be closed down.

White Bluff.—Gay Baker, the 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baker, was instantly killed while playing in the yard. A crocodile fell across his body.

Tipton.—John Armstrong, vice president of the Bank of Millington, died from heart failure, at the home of his brother, O. F. Armstrong, here. He was 70 years of age.

Dyersburg.—Major Wilkes, a negro, was killed at Finley by Pard Finley, deputy sheriff, while resisting arrest.
Wilkes had a quarrel with another negro over a woman.

Dyersburg.—Memorial services in honor of the late R. M. Neale were held at the Roellen Presbyterian church, where Rev. Mr. Neale was pastor for a number of years.

Memphis.—A great many Memphis merchants and farmers, with their families, will visit the experimental farm at Jackson, Aug. 2, which has been designated as Shelby county day.

Chattanooga.—The local lodge of Elks will start a campaign soon to raise $1,500 of the million dollars which the order proposes to raise for a base hospital on the French battle front.

Chattanooga.—Austin M. Deane, Clarksville may run for governor.
While in Chattanooga recently he stated that he had been strongly urged to make the race, but had not formally decided.

Knoxville.—The mortgage debt on property in this city exceeds $8,000-000, according to data compiled by John Rogers, who is directing the organization of a new trust company in this city.

Jackson.—Prof. R. E. L. Bynum, former superintendent of schools here before the inauguration of commission government for Jackson, has been appointed postmaster for the United States senate.

Knoxville.—A reduction of 750,000-000 gallons annually in the water consumption of Knoxville will result from the installation of meter services, according to a report of Commissioner J. G. Crumbliss.

Knoxville.—A monument to commemorate the services of the Seventy-ninth regiment, New York state volunteers, in the battle of Fort Sanders, Nov. 29, 1863, is to be erected on Fort Sanders in this city.

Knoxville.—Charged with "violation of the bone-dry laws," Constable N. A.
Simpson, of the first civil district, was given a hearing before Squire Wm. Sellers here. The charges were preferred against Constable Simpson by Sheriff John L. Gallaway, who recently raided Simpson's barn and found in it a large quantity of liquor.
Knoxville.—Engines from Southern railway lines are being given up for movement to France. Nine of the "dead" engines attached to one of the big moguls on the Knoxville division of the Southern, were started to the Atlantic seaboard, where they will be sent abroad.

Union City.—The construction work on the $30,000 new school building is being pushed rapidly by the contractors and the $6,000 new school building for the colored people is going up rapidly, and will be ready for occupancy by the opening of school this fall.

Lynchburg.—The trial of Chief of Police G. H. Scott, of Lynchburg, charged with the murder of James Silvertooth, on the public square last January, was concluded after a trial lasting nearly a week. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Unions and Merchants.
What does a strong local labor movement mean to the merchant? Just this: It means that the wage worker has enough to spend for the necessaries and some luxuries in life, a twenty-five dollar suit instead of a ten dollar one, a three dollar hat instead of a fifty cent one, better furniture at home with other comforts, good seats at the theaters and a little saved against future debilitation. A poorly paid nonunion worker is brother to the pauper—that is, he is a poor customer at best, even if he can remain honest and pay his debts.

EDUCATION OF
THE APPRENTICEMethod of Supplying Vocational Training a Problem.BETTER WORKMEN NEEDED

Under Haphazard System of Teaching Now In Vogue the Boy Who Wishes to Learn a Trade is Seriously Handicapped—Plan of Typographical Union Has Some Good Features.

How best to adapt our system of education to the needs of the pupil, of industry and of the community is one of the problems that is pressing for settlement. The importance of this problem is being more generally recognized every day, and the great labor organizations, the large industrial corporations, individual employers, social service workers, educators and parents are giving it not only consideration, but intensive study.

There is no doubt but that the great purpose of education is to increase not only the knowledge, but the usefulness of the individual, by preparing him or her to earn a better living and to be a better member of society. That society needs not cheaper but better workmen is an admitted fact, and both capital and labor are working, although along different lines, to reach this end.

One of the largest questions to be answered is: How shall vocational training be supplied? Shall it be in the high schools as independent school work, irrespective of actual shop experience, or in continuation schools, where apprentices shall study a few hours a week at the expense of the employer?

There is growing up among employers generally in industrial plants a realization that they owe a duty to their apprentices that they have not been performing. Except in a few institutions no attempt has been made until recently to really educate the apprentice. The boy endeavoring to learn a trade has been greatly handicapped by this condition, with the result that he has secured his industrial knowledge in haphazard fashion instead of in logical sequence with a view to its proper application. The reason for this has been that it was no one's duty to teach the apprentice. The journeymen were too valuable as producers to be used as instructors. Foremen had no time to devote to more than casual instruction, with the result that there have been turned out of the shops of this country a lot of half baked journeymen who had to really learn their trade at the expense of their subsequent employers.

Naturally such a condition is a tax upon any industry. Spoiled work and inefficient methods cost more than education, and, realizing that, a number of large industrial establishments set about providing the necessary education for their apprentices. Two general systems of training were pursued.
Some shops provided self contained schools under the direction of workmen detailed to that service, where the apprentices were required to spend a certain number of hours each day and to take periodical examinations to establish their proficiency. In other industrial centers the employers arranged with the local school authorities for special school courses for apprentices supplementary to the shop practice.
Both methods have worked well.

Some of the great labor unions, particularly the International Typographical union, established correspondence schools for journeymen and apprentices, but this work is voluntary and is taken up only by the more ambitious boys and men. The Typographical union in co-operation with employers is working out an apprenticeship plan under which both are to assist in the education of the apprentice, who must be periodically examined by the union officials to determine his progress and proficiency and to ascertain whether or not the employer is living up to his educational obligation and the boy is taking advantage of his opportunities.
If the employer does not provide proper facilities he is required to furnish them. If the boy shows upon examination that he is not adapted to the trade he will be told so and dismissed and cannot again enter as an apprentice.

All of these plans must be studied, and the one most adaptable to each community adopted. For each community has different educational and vocational needs. What shall be taught and how it shall be taught are the large questions to be determined.

In addition there is occupational guidance, a function of the vocational school, to determine by a study of the individual student the vocation or business to which his abilities and inclinations best adapt him, in order that there may be as few square pegs in round holes as possible.

Both of these are extremely large subjects presenting problems, the proper solution of which is vital to our industrial and commercial welfare.

The United States bureau of education at Washington is giving careful attention to these subjects in their various phases and maintains a special department for their study.—San Francisco Recorder.

Farmers to Blame.

Refusal of farmers to pay better wages despite the high prices they receive for their products is held partly responsible in a statement by Louis F.
Post, assistant secretary of the labor department, for the present lack of farm help. The demand for farm labor, Mr. Post says, must be met largely by the employment of boys this summer and by the release for
